While I agree that this is kind of a pretty well worked out detailed spec, it kind of misses the big picture in the fact that the basic system problems for electrical tuning, etc., have not been considered. I am uncertain at this point as to how we ought to proceed on to the end of this contract. I think it depends to some extent on how quickly  can reorient their thinking although they were given clues as to what we wanted to do in this area they obviously are just now beginning to understand the job. Do you have any particular hints?
